On Saturday we had a gymnastics competition. It was hard. We had to do a vault and a floor routine. We got a medal and a certificate.

P7 have been studying natural disasters. Teddy almost had an extra disaster when his volcano erupted more violently than he expected.

Finn demonstrated how a sinkhole occurs.

P3c made their own bug hotels in groups as part of outdoor learning fortnight. They tested them with water and little plastic Lego figures to see if they were waterproof.

Last weekend, Sean climbed a mountain named Ben Arthur (also known as The Cobbler) in Arrochar. It is 884m high and involves going through a rocky tunnel at the top to reach the summit.

This is the first time he's ever done a hill bigger than Arthur's Seat, and he did it without any complaint and was very brave.

On top of this, he wanted to do this as a sponsored walk for charity and raised £102 for a local charity called Positive Help.

I took part in the annual gymnastics competition doing a floor routine and vault. I'm very proud of myself because I felt nervous but really enjoyed it and received a medal and certificate.
